Enhanced Login Security is Coming to First National Bank

Keeping your financial and personal information secure and confidential remains one of our top priorities and here are just some of the practices we use to secure that information.

- Computer anti-virus protection detects and prevents viruses from entering our computer network.
- Firewalls block unauthorized access by individuals or networks.
- Secure transmissions ensure information remains confidential. We use encryption technology, such as Secure Socket Layer (SSL), to transmit personal information between you and us. This protects data in three key ways:
 - Authentication ensures that you are communicating with us, and prevents another computer from impersonating us.
 - Encryption scrambles transferred data so it cannot be read by unauthorized parties.
 - Data integrity verifies that the information you send to us is not altered during the transfer.
- Advances in security technology are constantly evaluated by security and technology experts to ensure that we provide the right protection for you.

All information included in the email series will be made available at our website under the heading titled Online Security. Please stay tuned for the next installment to be sent on September 25, 2006.
